2009 JOINT TRAINING CONFERENCE

Building Bridges: Partnerships in Crime Analysis

October 12—15, 2009

Doubletree Resort
Scottsdale, Arizona

About The Conference

The International Association of Crime Analysts (IACA) and the Arizona Association of Crime Analysts (AACA) are pleased to present the 19th Annual Training Conference.

This year's conference combines prominent criminal justice speakers, training professionals and valuable leadership insights for the crime analyst professional. Our annual training conference has long been a time to learn, share ideas, re-connect with peers from across the United States and abroad and meet new professionals.

The goal of this year's conference is to offer analysts and law enforcement professionals opportunities to learn and exchange new ideas by re-connecting and bridging the crime analysis knowledge gap.

New for 2009:

- More in-depth sessions
- Vendor Expo
- Five separate tracks

Program At-A-Glance

Hands On Computer Labs:

- Google Earth
- ArcGIS
- Crystal Reports
- Social Networking

Presentations

- Successful Crime Analysis Units
- Mapping Crime Hotspots
- Robbery Suppression
- Human Smuggling and Related Trends
- Calls for Service

Special Sessions

- IACA Certification Tests
- IACA and AACA Annual Business Meetings
- Round-Table Discussions

Premier Presenters

Allison DuBois' work with law enforcement agencies across the country formed the basis for the hit NBC television show, "Medium."

Lew Nelson from ESRI has been partnering with the law enforcement industry for more than 30 years.

Sgt. Doug Niemeier's successful work on a Kansas City serial murder investigation has been featured on A&E's "The First 48".

Mike Watkiss is an award-winning television reporter who has covered many of the major crime stories of this generation.
